PREFACE

It has been much easier in the past to choose hymns about some of the elements of Christian theology than about the Christian characteristics and ideals. In this Index the theological subjects will generally be found among the References to hymns for the festivals of the Christian Year, and to those in the Tables of 'Hymns Arranged' which are provided in the Music Editions of both the English Hymnal and Songs of Praise. These are ready to hand: the Christian virtues and ideals and the aspects of Christianity in practice have, on the other hand, never been connected adequately with Hymns by a Subject Index, as here is attempted.

Since this, then, is an Index of religion as well as of theology, it is based upon those virtues and fruits which the Christian Church from the days of S. Paul has recognized as essential to religion—virtues and fruits which were imperfectly represented in the nineteenth-century hymn-books. The Gifts of the Spirit will be found here—Wisdom, Knowledge, Understanding, Counsel, Might, Reverence; and S. Paul's Talents of the Spirit—the list wherein he adds to Wisdom and Knowledge, the Charismata of Faith, of Healing, and of Prophecy, of the powers of the saint, the abilities of the teacher, and those needed for other forms of work and service. The Cardinal Virtues are also here—Justice, Temperance, Fortitude, Prudence, as well as the Supreme Values—Goodness, Truth, and Beauty. The three Theological Virtues also—Faith, Hope, and Charity; and those nine Fruits of the Spirit, which are here indexed (with the Greek originals) under the more exact modern rendering of Dr. Moffat's translation as—Love, Joy, Peace, Good Temper, Kindliness, Generosity, Fidelity, Gentleness, Self-Control: to avoid confusion, however (and to help in the restoration of a noble word to its proper use), the first of these qualities is indexed as Charity, the Love of God and the Love of Man to God being treated as separate subjects. In the building up of the Christian character, it will be remembered also, the Spirit of God is described in different parts of the New Testament as the Spirit of Truth, of Wisdom, of Grace, of Life, of Sonship, and of Liberty.

If in this Subject Index preachers can find anything to help them, and if by it the difficult task of choosing hymns (so far-reaching in its results) is at all facilitated, the compiler will be well rewarded for many weeks of labour. He wishes to thank Miss Joan Harris for her valuable help, and Miss E. Walker for her help in the early stages of the work; also to say that he will be grateful for the notification of any errors that may be discovered.

It is hardly necessary to add that in some important subjects the Index would defeat its aim if it gave long lists of all the hymns which contain any mention of a word—if, for instance, 'Adoration' included such hymns as E. H. 67 or 390, or S. P. 55, or those which belong to a special festival like E. H. 28, 41 (S. P. 52 and 59), or those which are indexed under 'Praise'.

PART I

THE ENGLISH HYMNAL

The letters 'H. A.' refer to the Tables of Hymns Arranged for Sundays and Holy Days throughout the year, in the Music Edition.

The words 'And References' denote the short lists of Hymns, in all Editions, which follow each Section (and, in the case of Processional Hymns, precede it): e. g. in the Advent Section of the English Hymnal the References follow immediately after No. 13.

For Saints' Days, both Red-letter and Black-letter, see also the Table of Office Hymns before Hymns Arranged in the Music Edition, as well as the Tables of Hymns Arranged, and the Hymns themselves in their order in Part II of the book.

The hymns most suitable for Children (and easiest also for adults) are marked °. Another list, including other simple hymns, will be found after Hymns Arranged in the Music Edition: such hymns are starred in the Sunday School Edition.
